

Look No Further for Care in a Crunch

If parents stayed home with the kids every time they got the sniffles, they'd never leave the house. All that aside, if your child appears sluggish, lethargic or is unusually tearful, they may not have the ability to participate in an active, social day, so better to keep them home.

The Day Nursery Act forbids care of sick children in a daycare; kids must skip daycare if they have a fever, diarrhea, are vomiting, or have a contagious condition such as chicken pox, pink eye or strep throat. With all the pressures on working parents, it's sometimes tempting to ignore the gut feeling that says your child's too ill to attend daycare. Don't do it! It's terribly unfair to your child.

Sick-kid days are inevitable, so prepare by arranging emergency backup care. Keep in mind, the more R & R your little one gets now, the faster they will recuperate.
