The Sam Killermann Experience

September 22, 2015 9:00 am-12:00 pm ET
Comedy Show, Q&A, Meet and Greet

Sam Killermann is a comedian and social justice advocate and the guy behind It's Pronounced Metrosexual, a one-man comedy show and blog about snap judgments, sexuality, gender, and oppression (but in a totally funny way). He travels the country performing at colleges and universities and writes articles about social justice, gender, and sexuality when he's not on the road.

Sam, a Purdue University alum, has given a well-received TEDx talk where he distilled a few hundred pages of gender-bending discourse into a few minutes of energetic fun.

The show will leave you laughing, thinking, and full of questions, but no worries, a Q&A session will follow. By attending this event, participants will enhance their personal and professional development by understanding their own perceptions regarding LGBTQ inclusivity. Sam will provide you with a dynamic way to effect meaningful positive change in your life and community.
