In May, United Way of Greater Nashua welcomed 5 new members to its Board of Directors. This included independent consultant and coach Galina Szakacs, Nashua Mayor Jim Donchess, Edward Jones financial consultant Trent Blalock, NTU Union Representative and Teacher Deb Howes, and independent attorney Kristin Mendoza of Millyard Tech Law. According to United Way President Mike Apfelberg, “We are pleased to welcome these 5 new members to our Board. They have been hand-picked to help represent different aspects of our community, including municipal government, organized labor, the legal community, the Souhegan Valley region, and the One-Greater-Nashua diverse communities. By selectively adding this type of diverse backgrounds to our Board, we hope to improve the robustness of our dialogue and the impact in our community.”

About United Way of Greater Nashua

United Way of Greater Nashua currently provides program funding for 29 different programs in 17 different agencies throughout the greater Nashua area. This area encompasses 11 communities, including Nashua, Hudson, Merrimack, Milford, and the surrounding towns. United Way is also a stakeholder in the One-Greater-Nashua Coalition, the Nashua Prevention Coalition, the Mayor’s Opioid Task Force, the Greater Nashua IDN, and the Greater Nashua Early Childhood Coalition. United Way partners with individuals, companies, and thousands of company employees to raise these funds, primarily through payroll giving. United Way tries to help tackle the critical needs in our community by supporting many programs and agencies throughout Greater Nashua.
