The future for people with developmental disabilities is exciting; and probably a bit scary for families. The impact of CMS rules and pending lawsuits continues to change the way schools, businesses, disability services, and communities think and behave. The good news is-we're on the journey to a future where lives of people with disabilities are full, valued, connected, and respected and everyone is, included. This future also supports and empowers families to plan for a good life. Join us to...

- Hear about the work supporting families across the country and in Ohio
- Leave with tools to shape a vision for your family member's future
