

March 2016

Hello,

I'm writing in behalf of Chicago Children's Theatre with a special invitation for your school. We have a wonderful production coming up this Spring:

Jabari Dreams of Freedom, is a timely new production by award-winning playwright, Nambi E. Kelley. Jabari is a young boy who is scared and confused by the turbulent, sometimes unjust world around him. A gifted artist, Jabari escapes to the Civil Rights era through his colorful paintings where he interacts with children from the past—including a young Barack Obama. These poignant experiences empower him to live courageously in the face of fear. Jabari Dreams of Freedom contains powerful and uplifting themes and characters.

The run for this show is April 5 – May 1, and we have both matinee and evening performances.

We would like to offer your school to share with parents through your newsletter. If you are interested in passing along our information, we would be happy to give you a special promo code to get 20% off tickets to share with them. We can provide either digital content for an email, or physical materials, whatever would be most convenient for you.

Please let me know if you have any questions.
