

2015 Reverse Trade Show/Business Partner Exchange and Education

In a traditional trade show, business partners set up booths, hoping to make connections with decision makers while attendees stroll past their booth.

In a Business Exchange, attendees sit at tables, grouped by Management Company or community, while business partners move around. Based on the concept of "speed dating," it allows business partners an opportunity to network directly with decision makers for a specified period of time.

Attendees get a quick opportunity to meet our trusted business partners, and find new solutions, services and products to benefit their communities.
