

Hull is the newest Coast Guard City!

On Thursday, November 12th, Rear Admiral Linda Fagan joined Hull town officials and members of Hull's Coast Guard City committee at the Hull Lifesaving Museum to present the official proclamation designating Hull a national Coast Guard City. Hull is the twenty-first community in the United States to earn this honor, which recognizes a community's special ties to the Coast Guard, as well as a longstanding effort to support their local station and Coast Guard members. The proclamation was presented to Town Manager Phil Lemnios who, along with the Selectman Chris Mitchell spoke of the close and long-standing ties between the Town and the USCG Station Point Allerton.

L to R: CWO Robert Canepa, Commanding Officer, USCG Station Point Allerton, Rear Admiral Linda L. Fagan, Commander, 1st Coast Guard District, Selectman, Chris Mitchell.
Photo: Roger Jackson

The Hull Lifesaving Museum staff has been proud to help pursue this designation. We know that our members and friends join the museum's Board of Directors and staff in feeling truly grateful and honored to have the exceptional men and women of the Coast Guard as part of extended museum family. We look forward to a big Coast Guard City celebration this summer.

Roger Jackson, Hull Times

Stay Tuned!