

Feral Cat Resources in Napa County

(Source http://www.napahumane.org/resources_feral_cats.html)

Generally, people who want to help manage feral cats in their neighborhood do one of two things:

1. Trap, spay/neuter, vaccinate, and return to the neighborhood. Some expand their role and become caretakers by providing food to and monitoring the health of colony. This is the best way to handle a feral cat problem.
2. Trap, surrender to the Napa County Animal Shelter. Please note that the removal of a feral cat from his environment will most likely lead to another cat moving into his place.

An unmanaged colony will result in an abundance of kitten births. When a person decides to take responsibility of a colony, they will often take in kittens born to feral cats and either foster them until homes can be found or transfer the kitten to organizations that can foster them.
