

The Canada-BC Job Grant

The Canada-BC Job Grant (CJG) is an innovative cost-sharing program that helps employers offset the cost of training for new or current employees by sharing the cost of employee training with BC employers.

Employers can receive up to two-thirds of the cost of training for current and future employees, up to a maximum government contribution of $10,000 per year for each employee. For example, if an employer is seeking training valued at $1,500, the grant will reimburse $1,000 of the cost of training.

Who Can Apply?

Both private businesses and non-profit organizations can apply to the CJG. Your organization must be legally allowed to operate in BC and be in good standing with the provincial government.

Employers can send themselves and/or their staff for training directly related to their business or for general business skills training (i.e. accounting, marketing, etc.). All participants must either be a Canadian Citizen or a Permanent Resident.

How to Apply?

To begin your application, please complete and submit our Preliminary Employer Information Form and have each participant (including yourself if applicable) complete our Preliminary Participant Information Form.
