

Get your PAWS on a new book!

Now you can read to support a good cause! Velvet Morning Press, along with the authors who contributed to its new release, "Legacy: An Anthology," are donating all author proceeds from sales of the book to PAWS for People™ for its PAWS for Reading program!

"Legacy," a collection of short stories by writers including award-winner Kristopher Jansma and best-selling author Regina Calcaterra, is now available on Amazon: <http://amzn.to/1alHxb3>.

When Velvet Morning Press developed the idea for the book, the publisher gave contributors a specific challenge: In a month, write a story on this theme that is so linked to the permanent nature of the written word. Long after we've left this world, like words, our legacy remains. The resulting fiction and nonfiction stories fill the pages of "Legacy."

In "Legacy," there is laughter, pride and hope. There is romance and rock and roll. Certain messages are eerie, while others bestow a sense of peace. The collection, through the discerning lens of each writer, runs the gamut of the human experience.

Velvet Morning Press was inspired to bring together authors for this project after participating in The Book Wheel blog's "30 Authors" event last year. That event included 30 authors, each reviewing a favorite book on a participating blog. Velvet Morning Press liked the idea of teamwork among authors, so created the project for this anthology in collaboration with The Book Wheel. The publisher also liked the idea of supporting a good cause.

Allison Hiltz, The Book Wheel founder, suggested PAWS for Reading, and Velvet Morning Press founders Adria J. Cimino and Vicki Lesage quickly agreed.

"PAWS for Reading brings together children, books and animals, and we love all three," said Cimino. "It was the perfect fit. And for a publishing house, the best sort of legacy involves literacy. We are extremely grateful to our authors for their generosity and talent. Without them, we never could have put together such a wonderful book to benefit PAWS for Reading!"
