ADVANCED LEVEL TRAINING: DRAFTING ENFORCEABLE AWARDS

Sunday 3 November 2013

9:30am - 10am

Registration

10am - 1:15pm

Welcoming address and introduction

Drafting an arbitral award: which drafting style?

Participants will receive first-hand guidelines and knowledge on best practices pertaining to award legal drafting styles. How legal systems and traditions can influence drafting techniques, the different approaches in civil and common law; How to improve the quality of the award, by getting away from the “copy and paste” drafting style, to properly reflect the reasons behind the arbitral decision, identifying how much “reasoning” is necessary to render a fully convincing award and secure its enforceability.

Discussion

Drafting an arbitral award: spotlight on specific issues

This session will focus on particular sections of the award which often present difficulties and challenges in particular:

- Jurisdiction and applicable law
- Damages
- Auxiliary remedies: interest and costs

Discussion

1:15pm - 2:15pm

Lunch

2:15pm - 6pm

Introduction to scrutiny of the award by the ICC International Court of Arbitration (ICC Court)

Participants will gain a deeper insight into a distinctive feature of ICC arbitration, the ICC Court’s scrutiny of all draft awards. ICC representatives will share their expertise on the ICC Court scrutiny process, the different levels of review, the assistance and tools provided by the Secretariat of the Court, such as the “ICC Award Checklist”, to help arbitral tribunals, although respecting their liberty of decision, draft more legally effective awards.

Discussion

Working groups: draft awards review before scrutiny by the ICC Court

Participants will be given the opportunity to study a draft award, in the conditions in which a draft award would be reviewed before scrutiny by the ICC Court. Each working group will be responsible for reviewing the draft award and will make its comments as if it were a Counsel of the Secretariat of the ICC Court.

Mock Court session: scrutiny of awards by the ICC Court and debate

This is an opportunity for participants to witness the type of discussions that are held between members of the ICC Court and representatives of the Secretariat when reviewing a draft award. The parties to this mock court session will debate on the draft award reviewed by the working groups.
