Introduction to the New Testament with Dr. Judith Stack-Nelson

The New Testament stands as the key resources for preaching, theology, and spiritual formation, growth, and encouragement in the Christian tradition. This course will give students a foundational background in the process of faithful interpretation of New Testament texts for ministry and service in congregations. Learn more and register online.

War in Faith and Film with Dr. Bradley Burroughs

Is it possible for disciples of Jesus Christ to participate in or approve of war? If so, under what circumstances? Those are the central questions with which this course will wrestle. It will approach these questions through the lens of contemporary films that portray key aspects of war. Learn more and register online.

Preparing Congregations for Mission: Moving from Reflection to Action with Caroline McCall

This course integrates a theology of mission and the insights of asset-based community development to give clergy and lay leaders an urgently-needed toolkit for helping faith communities join in God's mission. Learn more and register online.

Genesis: Texts and Contexts with Dr. Julián González

This course is an introduction to the Book of Genesis, its structure and contents. We will discuss common misconceptions about the Bible and introduce it in relation to the cultures in the Ancient Near East. Learn more and register online.

Church in Anglican History, Theology, and Practice with Dr. Scott MacDougall

This course will investigate Anglican ideas about and practices of "church" in their historical and theological dimensions. The course will provide students with the tools and vocabulary they need for a deeper understanding of and involvement in both shaping and being church in an Anglican way in their own time and place. Learn more and register online.

Anglicanismo (in Spanish only) with the Rev. Dr. John Kater

This Spanish-language course is offered in two 12-week segments (2 weeks for each class), beginning in Spring 2016 and continuing with Part II in Fall 2016. It provides an introduction to the history of Anglican Christianity from the time of the Reformation through the growth of Anglicanism as a global Communion, with special emphasis on Anglican history and identity in the context of Latin America. Learn more and register online.
