MIGRANT INTEGRATION POLICY INDEX 2015

ANNOUNCES 2015 RANKINGS AND RESULTS!

How Does the United States Rank on Immigrant Integration?

This May, an event at The Brookings Institution will address how the U.S. compares to many of its fellow developed nations when it comes to integrating migrants into society. The data will explore what drives integration, the policies that lead global talent to settle and build businesses in other countries, and how enforcement is impacting the labor rights of migrants, in various corners of the globe.

WHAT: This spring, results from the fourth edition of the 2015 Migration Integration Policy Index (MIPEX), an initiative sponsored by the European Commission, and led by the Barcelona Centre for International Affairs (CIDOB) and the Migration Policy Group (MPG), are being released to the public.

MIPEX measures policies to integrate migrants in 38 countries, including all 28 EU countries, Australia, Canada, Iceland, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, Norway, Switzerland, Turkey and the U.S.

The U.S. data will be presented in a unique forum, highlighted by a panel of policy experts who will discuss labor mobility, as well as policies impacting immigrants in the U.S. workforce.

WHEN: MAY 21, at 10:30 a.m.

WHERE: The Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C.
1775 Massachusetts Ave, NW, Washington, DC 20036 (detailed directions will be forthcoming).

WHO: Boston College School of Social Work Professor Westy Egmont, the Director of the school’s Immigrant Integration Lab, and the lead counsel on the U.S. MIPEX assessment, will host the event and moderate the panel.

PANELISTS:

MARY GIVIGNOLI—Department of Homeland Security, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Immigration Policy

AUDREY SINGER—Senior Fellow at the Brookings Metropolitan Policy Program, specializing in demography, international migration, U.S. immigration policy, and urban and metropolitan change.

ANNE MORSE—Program Director of the Immigrant Policy Project at the National Conference of State Legislatures.

EVA MILLONA—Executive Director of the Massachusetts Immigrant and Refugee Advocacy Coalition, co-chair of the National Partnership for New Americans.
