

Thinking About Doing College Online?

By: Bebe Bode

There are over 1,000 colleges that offer at least a Bachelor's degree online. People can study any one of 100 different subjects without ever setting foot on campus. Some programs focus on rural students, others focus on commuter students. Some programs deliver live video feeds of an on-campus class, others have an online environment that encourages chatting and forum interactions.

The website, Bestschools.org, explores the world of online colleges and offers great tools for students and families, especially:
