

Individualized Education Programs (IEPs)

By: Shanida Mathieu

IEPs are designed to meet kids' unique needs. If you're new to the Individualized Education Program (IEP) process, you may wonder what your role is and how much you can offer. As a parent, you have intimate knowledge of your child's strengths, struggles and development. Your input regarding your child's IEP is valuable. Although you may not be an expert about special education, you are an expert about your child.

The IEP is often described as the cornerstone of special education. That's because this legally binding document details a student's annual learning goals as well as the special services and supports the school will provide to help him meet those goals. Participants will gain a better understanding of the IEP page by page as we discuss and review the steps you and the school must complete before your child can receive special education services.

Join us for our free webinar on Understanding and Writing an IEP, you can click on the link below to register.

Understanding and Writing an IEP - Participants will gain an understanding of the IEP content and the documentation necessary to develop an IEP. Discussion will focus on who is required to be involved in the development of an IEP and what the parent and school roles are in the process. Each section of the IEP will be reviewed with an explanation of what information is required by IDEA 2004 and what needs to be recorded in the various IEP sections.

Date: Thursday, December 10, 2015
