

Frank Meiners is a former executive of BellSouth, now at&t, where he was their Florida Lobbyist for 15 years before retiring in 2002. Prior to becoming BellSouth's legislative lobbyist, Frank represented BellSouth before the Florida Public Service Commission. He has experience with the regulatory process and has developed a significant working relationship with staff at the Commission, including the Commissioners. Frank has testified as an expert witness before the PSC on substantive technical and policy issues. He also has testified on key issues before Legislative Committees, specializing in tax, information technology, communications and education issues.

While lobbying for BellSouth he was active in the Florida Chamber serving on the Board of Governors, the Tax Committee and the Legislative Policy Council. Frank is a graduate of Leadership Florida, a program sponsored by the Chamber to help build a network of leaders throughout the state. Frank was the Florida Private Sector Chair for the American Legislative Exchange Council, a national organization of state Legislators that develop model legislation on key policy issues for the states.

Frank served on the Board of the Florida Telecommunications Industry Association for 10 years, serving as the President in 1999. He was the Chair of the Legislative Committee and the Tax Committee for FTIA as well.

He is a graduate of Duke University's Fuqua School of Management's Executive Program and has his Mathematics degree from University of South Florida. . Prior to working for BellSouth, Frank taught Mathematics at the University of South Florida.

Frank has been with Capitol Hill Group, LLP since he left BellSouth representing clients in the arts, arts education, information technology, communications, and taxes.