

1. With origins in classical rabbinic literature, the phrase tikkun olam refers to:

a) healing the world

<http://www.myjewishlearning.com/article/tikkun-olam-repairing-the-world/>

2. In Portuguese, a galinha do vizinho é sempre mais gorda, approximates our saying, the grass is always greener on the other side. A literal translation is:

b) your neighbor's chicken is always fatter

<http://blog.oxforddictionaries.com/2015/02/portuguese-idioms/>

3. From mid-16th century England, an apple squire was a:

d) A male companion of a woman of ill-repute

http://www.oxforddictionaries.com/us/definition/american\_english/apple-squire