1. The word confit (pronounced "kon-FEE") derives from the French verb confire, which means to preserve. Meat that is confit'ed is cooked at low temperature while:

   a) submerged in fat

   http://www.omniglot.com/writing/frisian.htm

2. The Tarahumara Indians of northern Mexico reside in Chihuahua, just to the southwest of Texas. They are known for their non-Spanish language, brilliant basket-weaving skills, bright wardrobes, and

c) long-distance running endurance http://ngm.nationalgeographic.com/2008/11/tarahumara-people/gorney-text

3. Recto means "the front of a leaf, the side that is to be read first." In languages that are written left-to-right, such as English, recto is the right-hand page. In languages written right-to-left, such as Arabic, recto is the left-hand page. The other side is called:

   b) verso

   http://wordsmith.org/words/recto.html