CPS is broke on purpose. For decades, politicians have diverted taxpayer money intended for Chicago's public schools to fund their pet projects. Now that the system is “broke,” Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel, Illinois Gov. Bruce Rauner and CPS interim CEO Jesse Ruiz think that teachers—and the parents of CPS learners—should expect and accept less.

As teachers, we stand for quality public education because every teacher wants to be an effective teacher.

As the Chicago Teachers Union, we are bargaining with the city to renew our contract, which expires June 30.

We ask you to stand with us as we fight for a quality education for every Chicago kid and a quality workplace for every Chicago teacher.

We want to protect teachers’ pensions so the profession will continue to attract and retain the best and brightest.

For information about what you can do, go to ctunet.com/june9.

TEACHERS’ WORKING CONDITIONS ARE STUDENTS’ LEARNING CONDITIONS.

TUESDAY, 5 PM
JUNE 9, 2015
THOMPSON CENTER, 100 W. RANDOLPH ST.