

Arunima Sinha

Arunima Sinha is the first female, Indian amputee to climb Mount Everest. Arunima had been a national volleyball and football player until she was pushed out of a moving train by robbers attempting to steal her purse. Another train passing by crushed her leg and the bottom part of her leg was amputated. Following the loss of her leg, Arunima was eager to do something with her life, which is what drove her to climb Mount Everest.