

Have you always wanted to grow your own food?

Do you believe everyone should have access to fresh, healthy, affordable food?

Maybe the Hudson Valley Food Justice Corps is right for you?

Food Justice Corps is a 10 month internship program sponsored by the Stony Point Center and the Food Justice Network, for youth ages 14-21 who want to learn more about developing a sustainable food systems. Join us twice a month in the summer and once a month during the school year for hands-on farming and educational experiences that look at the environment, fair labor practices, hunger and advocacy and more.

Modest stipends may be available for all member (Funding Pending).

For more information email: lori@hudrivpres.org or call 347-276-2606.

Agriculture & Gardening Basics

Advocacy Training

Cooking and Food Preservation

Composting & Waste Management

Ecological Stewardship

Film Screenings and Discussion

Visits to Local Farms & Food Justice Organizations

