COURSE DESCRIPTION

We will examine contemporary media practices through the lens of the Anthropocene, the time period in which human civilization has irrevocably reshaped the Earth. How has the digital age in turn transformed our perception of the natural world? From painters to photographers and filmmakers, a range of artists working in all mediums, as well as scholarly writers, will be our guides to inform a scrutiny of production contexts, circulation, and reception of media in a global, digital, and environmentally-fraught era.
