

KDS Elementary Registers Newest “Little Patriots”

April 10th was a big day for at least 91 four and five year olds from the area as they came to register for pre-k and kindergarten and become the next class of KDS DAR School Patriots. The KDS kindergarten and pre-k teachers, along with KDS counselor Kim Smith, assisted parents as they filled out the paperwork required for certain state and federal programs. The children met the teachers, some with excitement, others with nervous shyness. The children weren't the only ones with mixed emotions about the big day, as several mothers were seen with tears in their eyes as they realized a chapter of their lives was closing and that in August there would be no more little ones at home during the school day.

The teachers gave the future students a small taste of being in the classroom during their time with the children by asking them to tell them their name, how old they are, to name colors and shapes, to count to ten, etc.

Kindergarten teacher Laci Barnes is shown here meeting Eden Morrison, the daughter of KDS Elementary teachers Jason and Kandi Morrison.

The smiles on the faces of these newest “Little Patriots” show that they are eager to start kindergarten!
