Managing Childhood and Adolescent Obesity in Primary Care Settings

8:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.
Marriott East, Indianapolis • 7202 E 21st St, Indianapolis, IN

Families often seek guidance from trusted health care providers to make the best decisions about nutrition and physical activity for their children. Pediatricians, family medicine physicians, nurse practitioners, and other clinicians help families and children by asking about healthy eating and physical activity at every office visit.

But starting these conversations can be tough, and time is short at the doctor's office. Join us in September to learn how central Indiana clinicians can hone new communication techniques to guide families through weight management conversations. The workshop will also highlight the latest clinical guidance for preventing pediatric overweight and managing it effectively in the primary care setting.

Additional details will be posted in July at www.jumpinforhealthykids.org/cme.
