

The Endangered Species Act is Under Attack

As many as seventy five different bills and/or riders are pending or have been offered in this legislative session to systematically dismantle the Endangered Species Act, which protects species such as wolves, grizzly bear, sage grouse and other plants, animals and fish that need the Act's safeguards.

You can help! Congress is finishing up its annual recess, and returning to Washington. They need to hear from you--that you support protecting endangered species.

Ask your representative to oppose all Congressional efforts - including riders and bills - to undermine the Endangered Species Act, which is one of the most successful conservation laws ever adopted.

Urge President Obama to reject all riders attached to other bills that imperil species and weaken the ESA.
