

Rachel Carson's Legacy in North Carolina

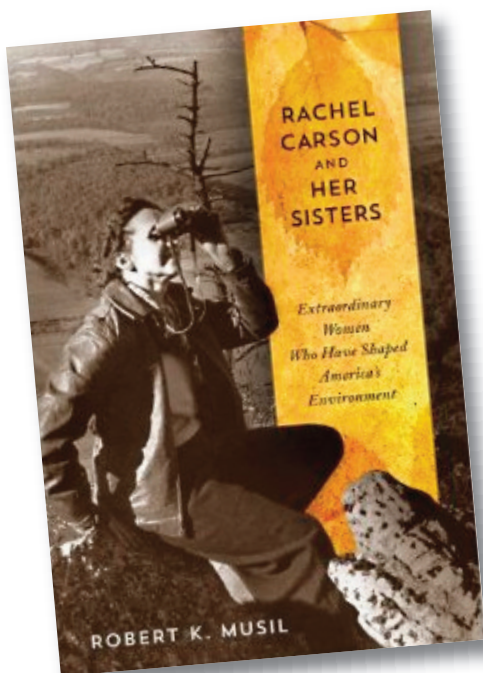

Join us for talks and book signings with
Dr. Robert K. Musil, author and CEO of the Rachel Carson Council on tour in NC

Robert K. Musil, Ph.D., M.P.H. is the President and CEO of the Rachel Carson Council (RCC), the national environmental organization envisioned by Rachel Carson and founded in 1965 by her closest friends and colleagues. The RCC promotes Carson's ecological ethic that combines scientific concern for the environment and human health with a sense of wonder and reverence for all forms of life in order to build a sustainable, just, and peaceful future.

Rachel Carson and Her Sisters: Their Legacy for Today

On tour in North Carolina, Bob Musil, environmental leader and author of Rachel Carson and Her Sisters: Extraordinary Women Who Have Shaped America's Environment (Rutgers, 2015), reveals surprising facts about the iconic Carson, her beliefs, and what she might urge students to do with today's environmental issues like climate change, factory farms and more. Musil, head of the Rachel Carson Council and former CEO of the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize-winning Physicians for Social Responsibility, will also sign copies of his latest book.
