Martha Horstman-Evans, playwright/teacher

Martha Horstman-Evans has been writing plays for kids for over 25 years. Her unique drama class is for kids ages 6-11. Her original plays give all of her players a chance to shine and work together to tell a great story. Her plays are full of humor, pathos, content and realistic dialogue. "Parents are tired of fairy tales, shows that have only one lead character, ridiculous rehearsal requirements and exorbitant prices to participate in a production. In our playhouse, the focus is on the kids and the play itself. No auditions. These kids don't need that pressure. This is fun stuff and every kid should get a chance to participate." Martha's 2015-16 original play production class starts on Tuesday Oct 13 and runs through April 16th. Class time is 4:15 to 5:30 on Tuesdays at the Washington Street Community Center located at Ohio and South Washington. The fee is $280 ($40 a month) for the entire season, including a performance on the 16th.
