Young and Old, Learning and Working Together

2 pm Sun., Jan. 10 Jewett Hall, Augusta

Our forum will present a panel highlighting some significant volunteer activities which reach across generations to provide not only much needed on-going support to their recipients, but enrich the lives of the volunteers themselves.

Ruth Saint Amand, director of Maine-General Retired & Senior Volunteer Program, (RSVP), and founder of the “Born to Read” and other programs, will discuss that organization’s “Thresholds” five-step decision-making model to assist Kennebec County Correctional inmates.

Marianne Pinkham, a regional director of Spectrum Generations centers, established Coastal Community Center’s “There’s No Place Like Home” Aging In Place Symposium and “Start Talking Before the Crisis Happens” Community Conversations. She will share with us her thoughts on our topic.

Terry McPhetres, a 12-year volunteer and current board member with Big Brothers/Big Sisters, will describe the process of older people mentoring young people and his joy at seeing his client through to graduation from high school.

Panel Moderator: Chuck Acker, FoF Chair
