

Job Seeker Success Story;

Tom Lambert from the Workforce Central Career Center located in Milford recently assisted a job seeker named Matthew Dalbec from Holliston, MA. Matthew has been seeking employment for two months. The barriers and troubles Matthew faced were interviewing for jobs. Matthew's connection with the Career Center was made by filing for unemployment through the Department of Unemployment Assistance.

Matthew was fully committed and engaged with the Career Center by working with Tom to identify what the issues were; preventing him from "sealing the deal" with employers during his interviews. Tom and other Milford staff worked with Matthew on his interviewing skills, which allowed him to become more confident about selling himself and to be more prepared when interviewing with potential employers. Through his hard work and services he finally SEALED that JOB! Along the way, Matthew refreshed his Microsoft Office skills by using the self-tutorial computer training programs for Microsoft Office 2010, took part in one on one meetings, and used the career center resources on a daily basis.

Matthew is now happily working for Bank of America as a Business Analyst III. Matthew felt that without the resources provided through the Career Center he could not have achieved his goal of obtaining employment and overcoming his barriers with interviewing. Matthew stated, "I would recommend the Career Center to other job seekers, it was a pleasant experience and most helpful." Tom adds, "Matthew was a pleasure to work with and always maintained a professional and positive attitude."
