

Workforce Central Offers Employer “Wicked” Good Service

When Wicked Good Solutions was recently in need of more people to fill their job openings, they turned to Workforce Central in Milford to give them a hand. The company, which specializes in serving the warehouse & light industrial sector, is located in Lowell with a local office in Sutton, and wanted help to help connect with area candidates conveniently.

They worked with Workforce Central staff to coordinate targeted recruiting sessions at the career center, which also served as a place to complete application paperwork. As a result, there were a total of seven candidates who were interviewed, and three of the candidates were offered jobs pending their background checks. One candidate is within a commutable distance to two of their locations. A representative from Wicked Good Solutions expressed gratitude with the services, noting that she’s been in recruiting for over 20 years and she “has had the best support and experience with the Milford Career Center,” including help with solving a significant challenge they had finding candidates who can start in one location and later relocate to other locations.
