

IEPI Inmate Education Training Workshops

Is your college ready to teach “behind the walls” and make an important impact on our prison population?

General Information

Inmate education is perhaps more important now than ever. As the population of incarcerated people in California increases and evidence accumulates about the effectiveness of prison education programs on recidivism, community colleges are poised to take the lead in educating this unique segment of our state’s population. Through this training, we will explore how your district can effectively develop and implement a high quality face-to-face and distance education program. This workshop will also include a visit to a partnering correctional institution where attendees will have the opportunity to see first-hand the classroom environment, meet and hear from prison education and custody staff, and speak with current community college students on the inside.

Who Should Attend?

Each college is encouraged to send a small team of representatives including faculty, administrators, and instructional support and student services personnel. Attendees will leave this training with a practical understanding of the rules and regulations surrounding inmate education environment, strategies for identifying California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) partners, best practices in course and program selection, and strategies for recruiting the training faculty.
