Make Inclusion Successful at the Secondary Level

From “Get'em in” – to “Get'em through” – and now “Get'em ready!” the focus of IDEA and post-secondary transition for middle and high school students with disabilities has shifted to prepare students for life beyond high school. The shift now includes preparing students for further employment, post-secondary education, and independent, community-based living. This training will concentrate on how to best prepare high school students to meet such goals via appropriate transition planning, curriculum supports and modifications, and social skill training during adolescence.
