

U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs
Explore VA – Social Media Content for VA Partners
April 27, 2015

Note: Graphics in this document are for reference only. Please use the high-resolution photo files in this Google folder.

General and Count-Down Posts
ID	Medium	Post	Graphic
	Facebook	These women were combat medics or served in civil affairs or military intel—and now they're advocating for #womenVeterans to get the @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs health care they've earned. Join them for an #ExploreVA YouTube Live event on Tuesday, May 5, at 2 p.m. ET. Hear why they choose VA. Register here: http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4	 A graphic for a YouTube Live event. It features a blue header with the text "Join the #ExploreVA YouTube Live event". Below this, there's a red YouTube play button icon and the text "Women Veterans' Voices: VA Health Care Serves Us". At the bottom, it says "May 5, 2 p.m. EDT". The graphic is decorated with several small, overlapping photos of women in military uniforms.
	Twitter	Join OEF/OIF #womenVeterans for a @DeptVetAffairs YouTube event on May 5 to hear why they choose VA health care: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo
	Facebook	Join Dr. Patty Hayes, VA's national director of women's health, and a panel of OEF/OIF female Veterans for a live discussion of the issues women Veterans face and how VA health care is changing to meet their needs. Register for the May 5 event: http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4	 A portrait of Dr. Patty Hayes, a woman with short, curly brown hair and glasses, wearing a dark jacket over a red top. She is smiling and standing in front of a blue background with white stars, resembling the American flag.
	Twitter	Join #womenVeterans for a discussion on women's health care & how @DeptVetAffairs is changing to meet their needs: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo

	Facebook	The @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs is dedicated to serving #womenVeterans—past, present, and future. Learn how women Veterans can help VA continue to improve. http://1.usa.gov/1tJli4
	Twitter	Register for the May 5 discussion of how women Veterans are helping @DeptVetAffairs health care evolve: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo
	Facebook	“If you last tried VA 20 years ago, come back. VA is here for us.” On Tuesday, May 5, join a live discussion with a group of young women Veterans who use @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs health care. Register here: http://1.usa.gov/1tJli4
	Twitter	“If you last tried @DeptVetAffairs 20 years ago, come back. VA is here for us.” Hear more on May 5: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo

	Facebook	Ask women #Veterans who choose @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs health care—they'll tell you it's better than the private sector. On Tuesday, May 5, join a panel of women who served in OEF/OIF for a discussion on how VA is changing to meet their needs. http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4
	Twitter	Ask women Veterans who choose @DeptVetAffairs health care—they'll tell you it's better than the private sector. More: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo
	Facebook	Join Dr. Patty Hayes, who oversees @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs women's health care, as she leads a discussion on how VA is dedicated to serving women #Veterans—past, present, and future. http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4
	Twitter	Dr. Hayes oversees @DeptVetAffairs women's health care; on 5/5 she is leading a panel on VA health care for women: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo

Facebook	The number of #womenVeterans doubled in the last 10 years—and it’s going to double again soon. On Tuesday, May 5, hear from women who served in OEF/OIF on how the @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs is making big changes to better meet women’s health care needs: http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4
Twitter	The number of women Veterans doubled in the last decade and will double again soon. @DeptVetAffairs is changing too: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo
Facebook	Today’s #womenVeterans have a message for the past generation: “VA is here for us.” Join a live panel on Tuesday, May 5, to learn why you should choose @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs health care. http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4
Twitter	Today’s women Veterans have a message for the past generation: “VA is here for us.” Learn more: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo
Facebook	“I’ll keep advocating for women Veterans like me to get the health care we’ve earned because VA is here for us.” Hear OEF/OIF #womenVeterans discuss this @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs culture change during a live panel May 5. http://1.usa.gov/1tJjIi4

	Facebook	“My military service is over, but I want to serve those who came before me and those who will follow. And it starts with letting them know the @U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs is here for them.” OEF/OIF #womenVeterans spread the word about VA health care during a live panel at 2 p.m. ET on Tuesday, May 5. http://1.usa.gov/1tJjli4
	Twitter	“Military women: VA is here for us. You serve today, and @DeptVetAffairs will serve you tomorrow.” Learn more: http://1.usa.gov/1ot5LWo	