How do our choices influence our lives?

People during the Holocaust made crucial choices that impacted not only their own lives, but also those around them. Learn about some of these decisions, the effects they had during the Holocaust and their connection to the modern era in a unique 21 panel display.

“The exhibit is about the choices young people made before and during the Holocaust and the choices they make today when confronted with stereotyping, prejudice and all violations of human rights.” -New Mexico Human Rights Projects

Since 1995, New Mexico Human Rights Projects (NMHRP) has worked hard to educate and train students and teachers for a more respectful, peaceful and responsible society. NMHRP programs challenge youth to think critically about the choices they make when confronted with all forms of discrimination, to assume greater personal responsibility for their actions, to recognize and reject all forms of prejudice and violence, and to deal more sensitively with others.
