

Are you the parent of a child diagnosed with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)?

Are you interested in sharing your experiences and ideas about how to best support kids with ASD in elementary school?

We would like to hear from you!

The University of South Florida is conducting a series of focus groups for our study, "Students with Autism Accessing General Education (SAAGE)," to collect input on a new evidence-based intervention. We would like to hear from parents and educators who support students with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) in elementary schools. The input from these focus groups may help in the development of this new intervention.

What will happen?

- One two-hour meeting with other parents who share similar experiences
- Private space to share your opinions freely
