Information Technology

Cyber Security: The New Frontier

With over eighty million financial, retail, and health records being compromised in the first half of 2015 alone, the proliferation of cyber-attacks is something that consistently makes headlines and large organizations, despite their size, are not immune. Given the ever increasing amount of confidential data, cyber security and the technology behind keeping data safe, is something that the venture community is keenly interested in. That being said, the amount of money invested in data protection and cyber security is enormous and far exceeds the number of large exits that have taken place within the sector. This expert panel will discuss the ever evolving environment of cyber security and the obvious disparity between the dollars invested and both the size and quantity of exits in this critical sector.
