

Kate Breslin is the President & CEO of the Schuyler Center for Analysis and Advocacy (scaany.org). With Kate's leadership, the Schuyler Center is building upon its long history as a strong, independent voice and coalition-builder that holds government accountable and helps to shape public debates around social policies that affect New Yorkers. Kate has spent her career analyzing and advocating in support of thoughtful policy solutions that improve the lives of people in the US and abroad.

Kate previously served as the Director of Policy for the Community Health Care Association of New York State (CHCANYS), where she directed CHCANYS' public policy projects and initiatives to improve access to high quality primary care in underserved communities. She was a Project Director for the California Budget Project, analyzing state budget and tax policies.

Kate served as a Peace Corps Volunteer in Sierra Leone, West Africa. She has led and worked on relief and development programs in several African nations.

Kate earned Masters Degrees in both Public Health and City and Regional Planning from the University of California at Berkeley and a Bachelor of Science from Northwestern University.
