

Women & Infants'

BROWN
Medical School

Division Director, Division of Research (Academic)

The Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University, housed at Women & Infants Hospital, is seeking a full-time Division Director for the Division of Research. Successful candidate must qualify for a full-time faculty position at the rank of Associate Professor or Professor in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Brown. Must be ABOG board certified, have a national reputation of scholarly productivity, a track record of effective leadership in Women's Health research including collaboration, excellent teaching skills, clinical research experience, grant writing ability, and project management skills. Must be eligible for medical licensure in Rhode Island. Candidate must have previous management experience directing physician faculty and research support staff along with the passion and commitment to help lead a team committed to research and teaching. Outstanding communication skills are essential.

Interested individuals should submit a letter of inquiry and CV online via INTERFOLIO at: <http://apply.interfolio.com/29411> Review of applicants will begin immediately, and will continue until a successful candidate has been identified or the search is closed. Women & Infants is an AA/EEO employer and actively solicits applications from minorities, women, and protected persons.