

Baylor College of Medicine

Chair of Medicine

Baylor College of Medicine seeks to recruit an exceptional leader for the role of Chair of Medicine. This individual will be recognized as a visionary leader with credibility for achieving high standards in patient care, education, and research. With the new Baylor St. Luke's Medical Center joint venture, the opening of its state-of-the-art McNair campus, the additional affiliations with nationally ranked teaching partners such as the Michael DeBakey VA, Ben Taub Hospital and Texas Children's Hospital, and a robust basic research arm that includes the #1 ranked Genetics Department in the US, this is an unparalleled opportunity to set a new national standard of excellence in Medicine.

Recognized as one of the top medical schools in the nation, the average GPA of the medical school's incoming class is 3.88, and the MCAT average is 35.8. The Department of Medicine has 566 full-time and 388 volunteer faculty members, 228 medical residents, and 41 post-doctoral research fellows and boasts a physician satisfaction score of 84%.

Significant vision, communication skills, and business acumen are required to effectively lead the clinical, research and educational enterprise with the goal of achieving a top-tiered, nationally ranked department. This individual must have a successful track record of mentoring and developing superior faculty and supporting them in their academic, teaching and clinical endeavors.

Baylor College of Medicine (BCM): The only private medical school in the greater Southwest, BCM is an internationally renowned medical and research institution that attracts students from around the world. BCM consistently ranks among the top of the nation's 141 medical schools with U.S. News and World Report, placing the College 21st in its annual survey of best medical schools for research and 11th for primary care.

Please submit nominations and/or curriculum vitae to the search consultant: Jannah Hodges, Managing Partner, Hodges Partners, 100 Highland Park Village, Suite 200, Dallas, TX 75205, Phone: (214) 902-7901, E-mail: jannah@hodgespartners.com