

Dean, School of Medicine and

Executive Vice President for Medical Affairs

Richmond, VA

Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU) invites applications and nominations for a strategic and collaborative physician leader and scholar as its Dean of the School of Medicine (SOM) and Executive Vice President of Medical Affairs (Dean/EVP) based in Richmond, Virginia. The successful candidate will implement a plan that assures national prominence for the medical school, will promote continued excellence in the medical school's education, research, outreach, and clinical services, and will oversee its academic programs, faculty, staff, students, facilities, resources, budgets, and fundraising. As Executive Vice President of Medical Affairs, the Dean has oversight of the Medical College of Virginia Physicians practice plan. The Dean/EVP will cultivate strong relations within the integrated health system, the broader university community, and with key external stakeholders including policymakers and leaders of the state's health care systems. The successful candidate will support the department chairs to enhance their ability to create and maintain world-class education, research, and clinical care.

The SOM is the largest medical school in Virginia with 29 basic science and clinical care departments, has received $144 million in sponsored research awards, and ranks 54th in the country for NIH funding. A top priority for the new Dean will be to continue to strategically grow the research enterprise through strategic recruitments and securing the requisite resources to build outstanding programs that position the School of Medicine for national prominence. The opportunities to forge an inspiring vision for the future of the School of Medicine, elevate the research, clinical, and educational enterprise, serve as an advocate at the state level and develop new resources to secure the long-term growth of the School of Medicine are numerous and exciting. Through bold leadership, the successful individual will significantly enhance the national and international reputation of the School of Medicine and VCU.

Reporting to the Vice President of Health Sciences and CEO of the VCU Health System, the successful candidate will have a distinguished record of leadership and scholarship in a complex, clinically competitive, diverse, urban academic health center. An MD or the equivalent degree is required. In addition to a distinguished academic and clinical career, this individual will have a proven capacity working with local communities, including state and local government officials and agencies. The position also requires a commitment to provide the finest of educational programs, the most relevant research, and the highest quality of care to the vibrant and diverse population of VCU, the Richmond area, and beyond.

Please direct inquiries, nominations, and applications to Isaacson, Miller, a national retained executive search firm. All replies will be held in strict confidence.
