

Weill Cornell Medicine (WCM) of Cornell University (CU) has begun the recruitment process for the next Dean of WCM and Provost for Medical Affairs for CU. This represents one of the most attractive leadership positions in academic medicine today.

The Dean/Provost is responsible for the oversight of Weill Cornell Medicine (WCM), Weill Cornell Graduate School of Medical Sciences (WCGSMS) and WCM in Qatar. The Dean/Provost is the leader for the combined research, clinical practice, educational and global health enterprise and is primarily responsible for the continued success, growth, and development of all activities of the internationally prominent academic health center.

The position description details this unique opportunity for a consummate physician/scientist leader to lead a vibrant, growing academic medical institution, affiliated with some of the most prominent patient care and research institutions in the country, with enormous and growing momentum in all aspects of its academic missions and an extraordinary record of philanthropic and other support to realize its aspirations. Weill Cornell Medicine is extraordinarily well positioned to confront the challenges facing academic medicine, while continuing to evolve as a globally preeminent medical college.
