Presents their new original play

The ‘N’ Word

Written by Kelly Franklin  Directed by Kelly Franklin and Bashi Rose

Monday April 29, 2013 4:00pm
Monday May 6, 2013 4:00pm
(2 Show times)

Maryland Correctional Center
18800 Roxbury Road
Hagerstown, MD 21746

The ‘N’ Word tells the story of a substitute teacher named Mr. Imus with a “grenade” for a tongue whose known for using degrading language towards children. Did Mr. Imus in the heat of the moment really address his class with the ‘n’ word or was his frustration mistaken for the degrading term? Find out on April 29th and May 6th during the performance of this one act comedy/drama.

D.R.A.M.A. started at the Maryland Correctional Training Center (MCTC) in 2007 and has expanded into Maryland Correctional Institution Jessup (MCJJ) and Jessup Correctional Institution (JCI). This theater-based project encourages participants to acquire new skills through doing. Using role-playing, group discussion, writing, and improvisation to build healthy relationships, create support structures, develop effective communication skills and create original theatre.

Outside guests are strongly encouraged come support their work. To begin the process please email Bashi Rose at bashirose@gmail.com