american institute of architecture students

Since 1956, the American Institute of Architecture Students (AIAS) has functioned as an intercollegiate network and representational voice for architecture students. The AIAS is an independent, non-profit organization dedicated to linking its student constituents to the diverse academic, social, and creative opportunities that are critical in their development as design professionals.

At the heart of all AIAS activities is a cooperative effort designed to transform today's student into the architect and design professional of tomorrow. This includes not only an active and involved student membership, but also a close and mutually supportive role for faculty, professionals, the design community and the corporate community who contribute in the advancement of the art and science of architecture.

In partnership, the American Institute of Architecture Students, Lawrence Tech and University of Detroit Mercy Chapters, will be hosting our 6th Annual Beaux Arts Ball this year on February 13, at St. Andrews Hall in Detroit. This is an excellent opportunity for students, faculty, and architecture professionals to network in an inviting, formal setting. This year to emphasize our intent our theme is Synergy, a combination of syndicate(networking) and energy(dancing).

In an effort to continue this annual celebration and build a network within our community, we are asking for your support. To donate and offer your support please select an option(s) listed to the right. As a non-profit 501(C)(3) you may receive tax credit amongst the advertisement we will ensure with your donation: promotion on website, posters, tickets, serving stands, as well as, vocal and visual acknowledgment during our dinner presentation.
