

Hartsville Student Donates 100-plus Pairs of Eyeglasses to Lions Club

Bradley Windham, a home-schooled student from Hartsville, served as the guest speaker at club meeting. Windham brought with him 120 pairs of used eye glasses he collected from members of the community and presented them to the club. When he was challenged with coming up with a service project for “connecting to my world,” Windham said he looked up several charities as possibilities. He decided on the Lions eyeglass recycling project because he wears contacts and could relate to the need to see better. Club President Steve presents certificate and pen.
