

Booker Edgersen... A Personal Story

There are a lot of lives and families that have been touched by cancer. We should encourage and embrace current cancer research, especially Prostate Cancer prevention, treatment and awareness.

There is a closer connection than most people would imagine between NFL players and the male population, since all males are potentially at risk for contracting this dreaded disease. The Buffalo Bills Alumni Foundation, along with local businesses, community-based organizations and individuals, all have a personal stake in this project.

As a prostate cancer survivor, there is not a day that goes by that at some point I do not think about how fortunate I am that I visited my doctors regularly, checking to see if I had any health issues, which also included PSA level and colon readings. I remember being told after my treatment that I was cancer free; however, my inner-sense was that once you have cancer, there is always a chance that traces of the cancer will be lurking around somewhere in your body.

October is a special month to raise the awareness for Breast Cancer for women and is celebrated by the National Football League and the American Cancer Society throughout the 32 NFL cities and the United States. It would be only fitting to have September (which is P

Why is Prostate Cancer Important?

Prostate Cancer is the most common malignancy in American men and the second most leading cause of deaths from cancer, after lung cancer. According to the American Cancer Society's most recent estimates, approximately 238,590 new cases of Prostate Cancer would be diagnosed in 2013 and approximately 29,720 would die from the disease.

1 man in 6 will develop
Prostate Cancer
during his lifetime

