

Amnesty International and IPSA Present:

Unaccompanied Minors

After a summer of intense media coverage, the question still persists: how should we handle children crossing the border without a guardian? And, how do we create a policy that respects these children's human rights while maintaining national security?

Join Amnesty International's U-M chapter and the International Policy Student Association to discuss immigration policy with Professor Jesse Hoffnung-Garskof from the History Dept. and Professor Ann Lin from the Ford School. We will be exploring the historical, legal, and political aspects of responding to the unaccompanied minors crisis.
